

THE IDEA

Lacoste has a long-standing partnership with The Everglades Foundation, a non-profit organization dedicated to protecting and restoring America's Everglades, the only place on earth that is home to both alligators and crocodiles.

To help protect this important ecosystem, we created a unique color with Pantone: FOREVERGLADES by Lacoste.

This color will live through the capsule collection Lacoste x The Everglades Foundation, that will be launched on Everglades Day (April 7th 2020), with parts of the proceeds going to The Everglades Foundation, to provide over 100,000 K-12 educators and students the tools to incorporate conservation into their school's curriculum.

MIAMI STORE FRONTS

On the eve of Everglades day, all Miami storefronts will change colors to tease the collection.

PR RELEASE

Today is a special day.

Together with Pantone we have created a color inspired by the Everglades:
FOREVERGLADES by Lacoste.

A color that encapsulates 1.5 million acres of incredible flora and fauna.

A color that led to the creation of a capsule collection.

A collection with a desire to make the Everglades last forever.

To make sure this unique ecosystem exists for generations to come, a portion of proceeds from every item sold will be donated to The Everglades Foundation, to provide over 100,000 K-12 educators and students the tools to incorporate conservation into their school's curriculum.

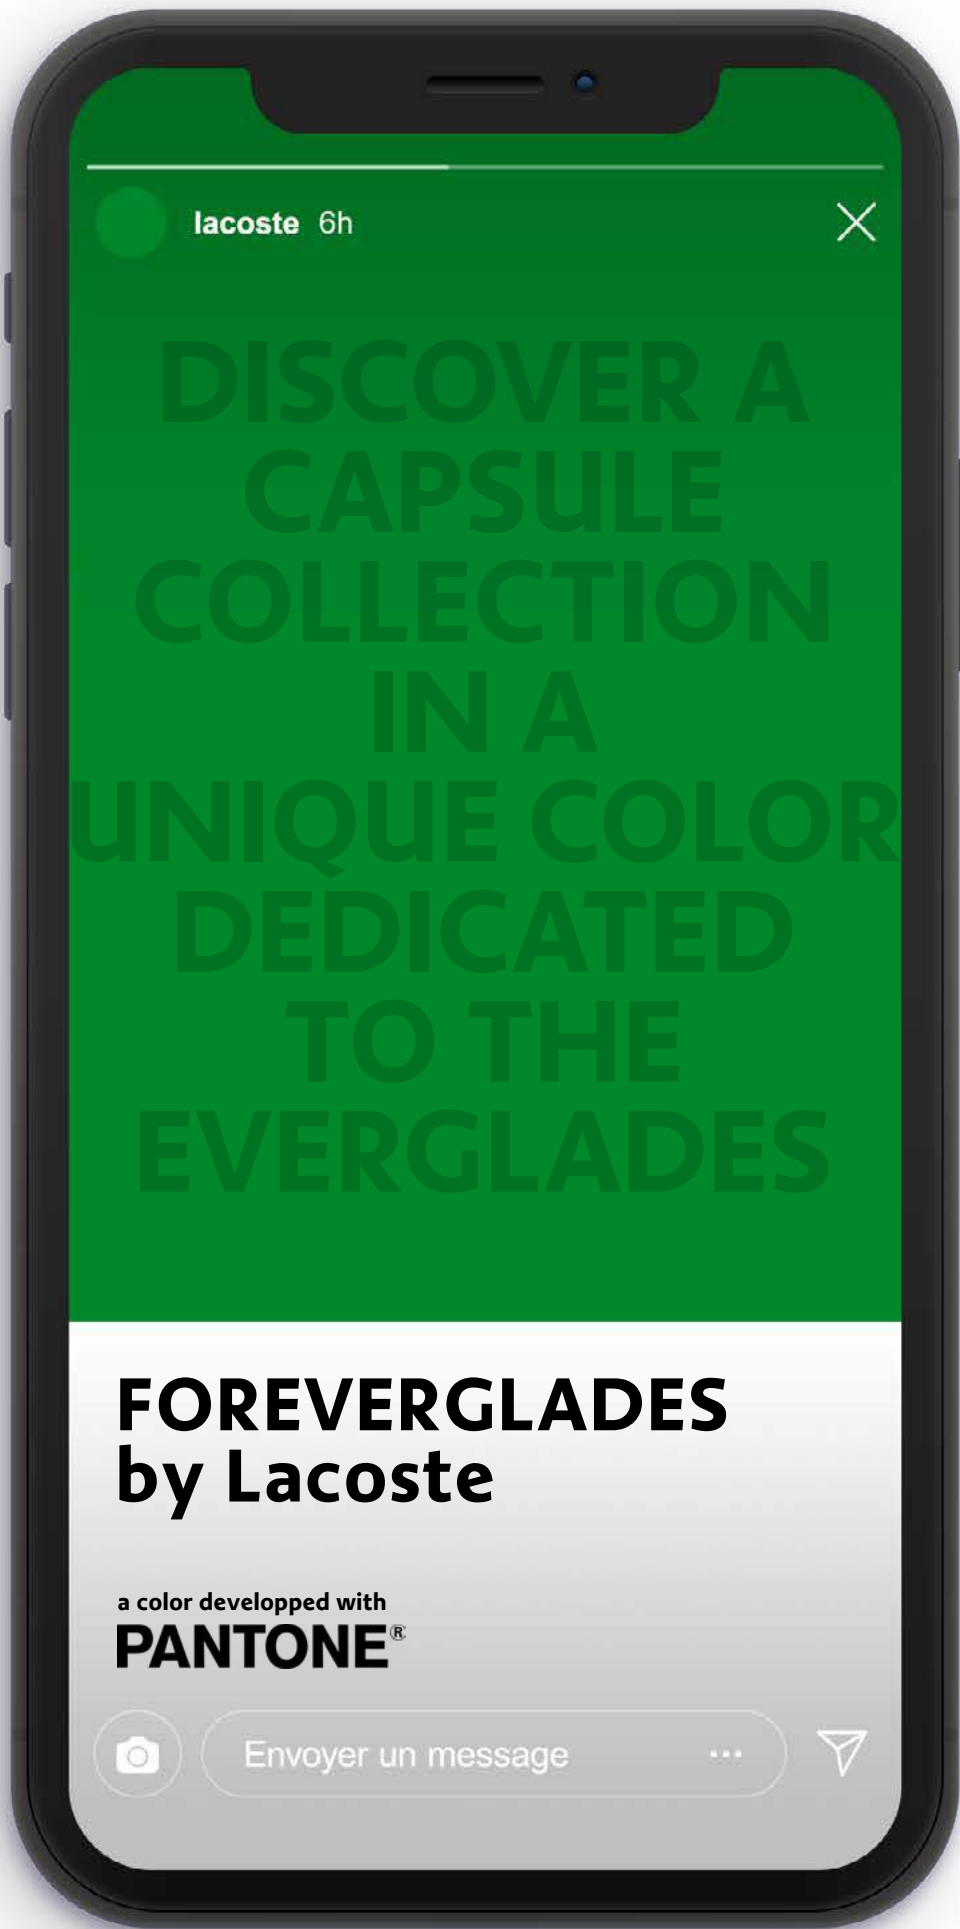

REVEAL OF GREEN TAKEOVER

On Everglades day, Lacoste will reveal the meaning behind the green takeover on various platforms.

They will share Instagram stories inviting their followers to find out about the collection.

A PR kit containing images and videos will be made available so they can be easily shared.

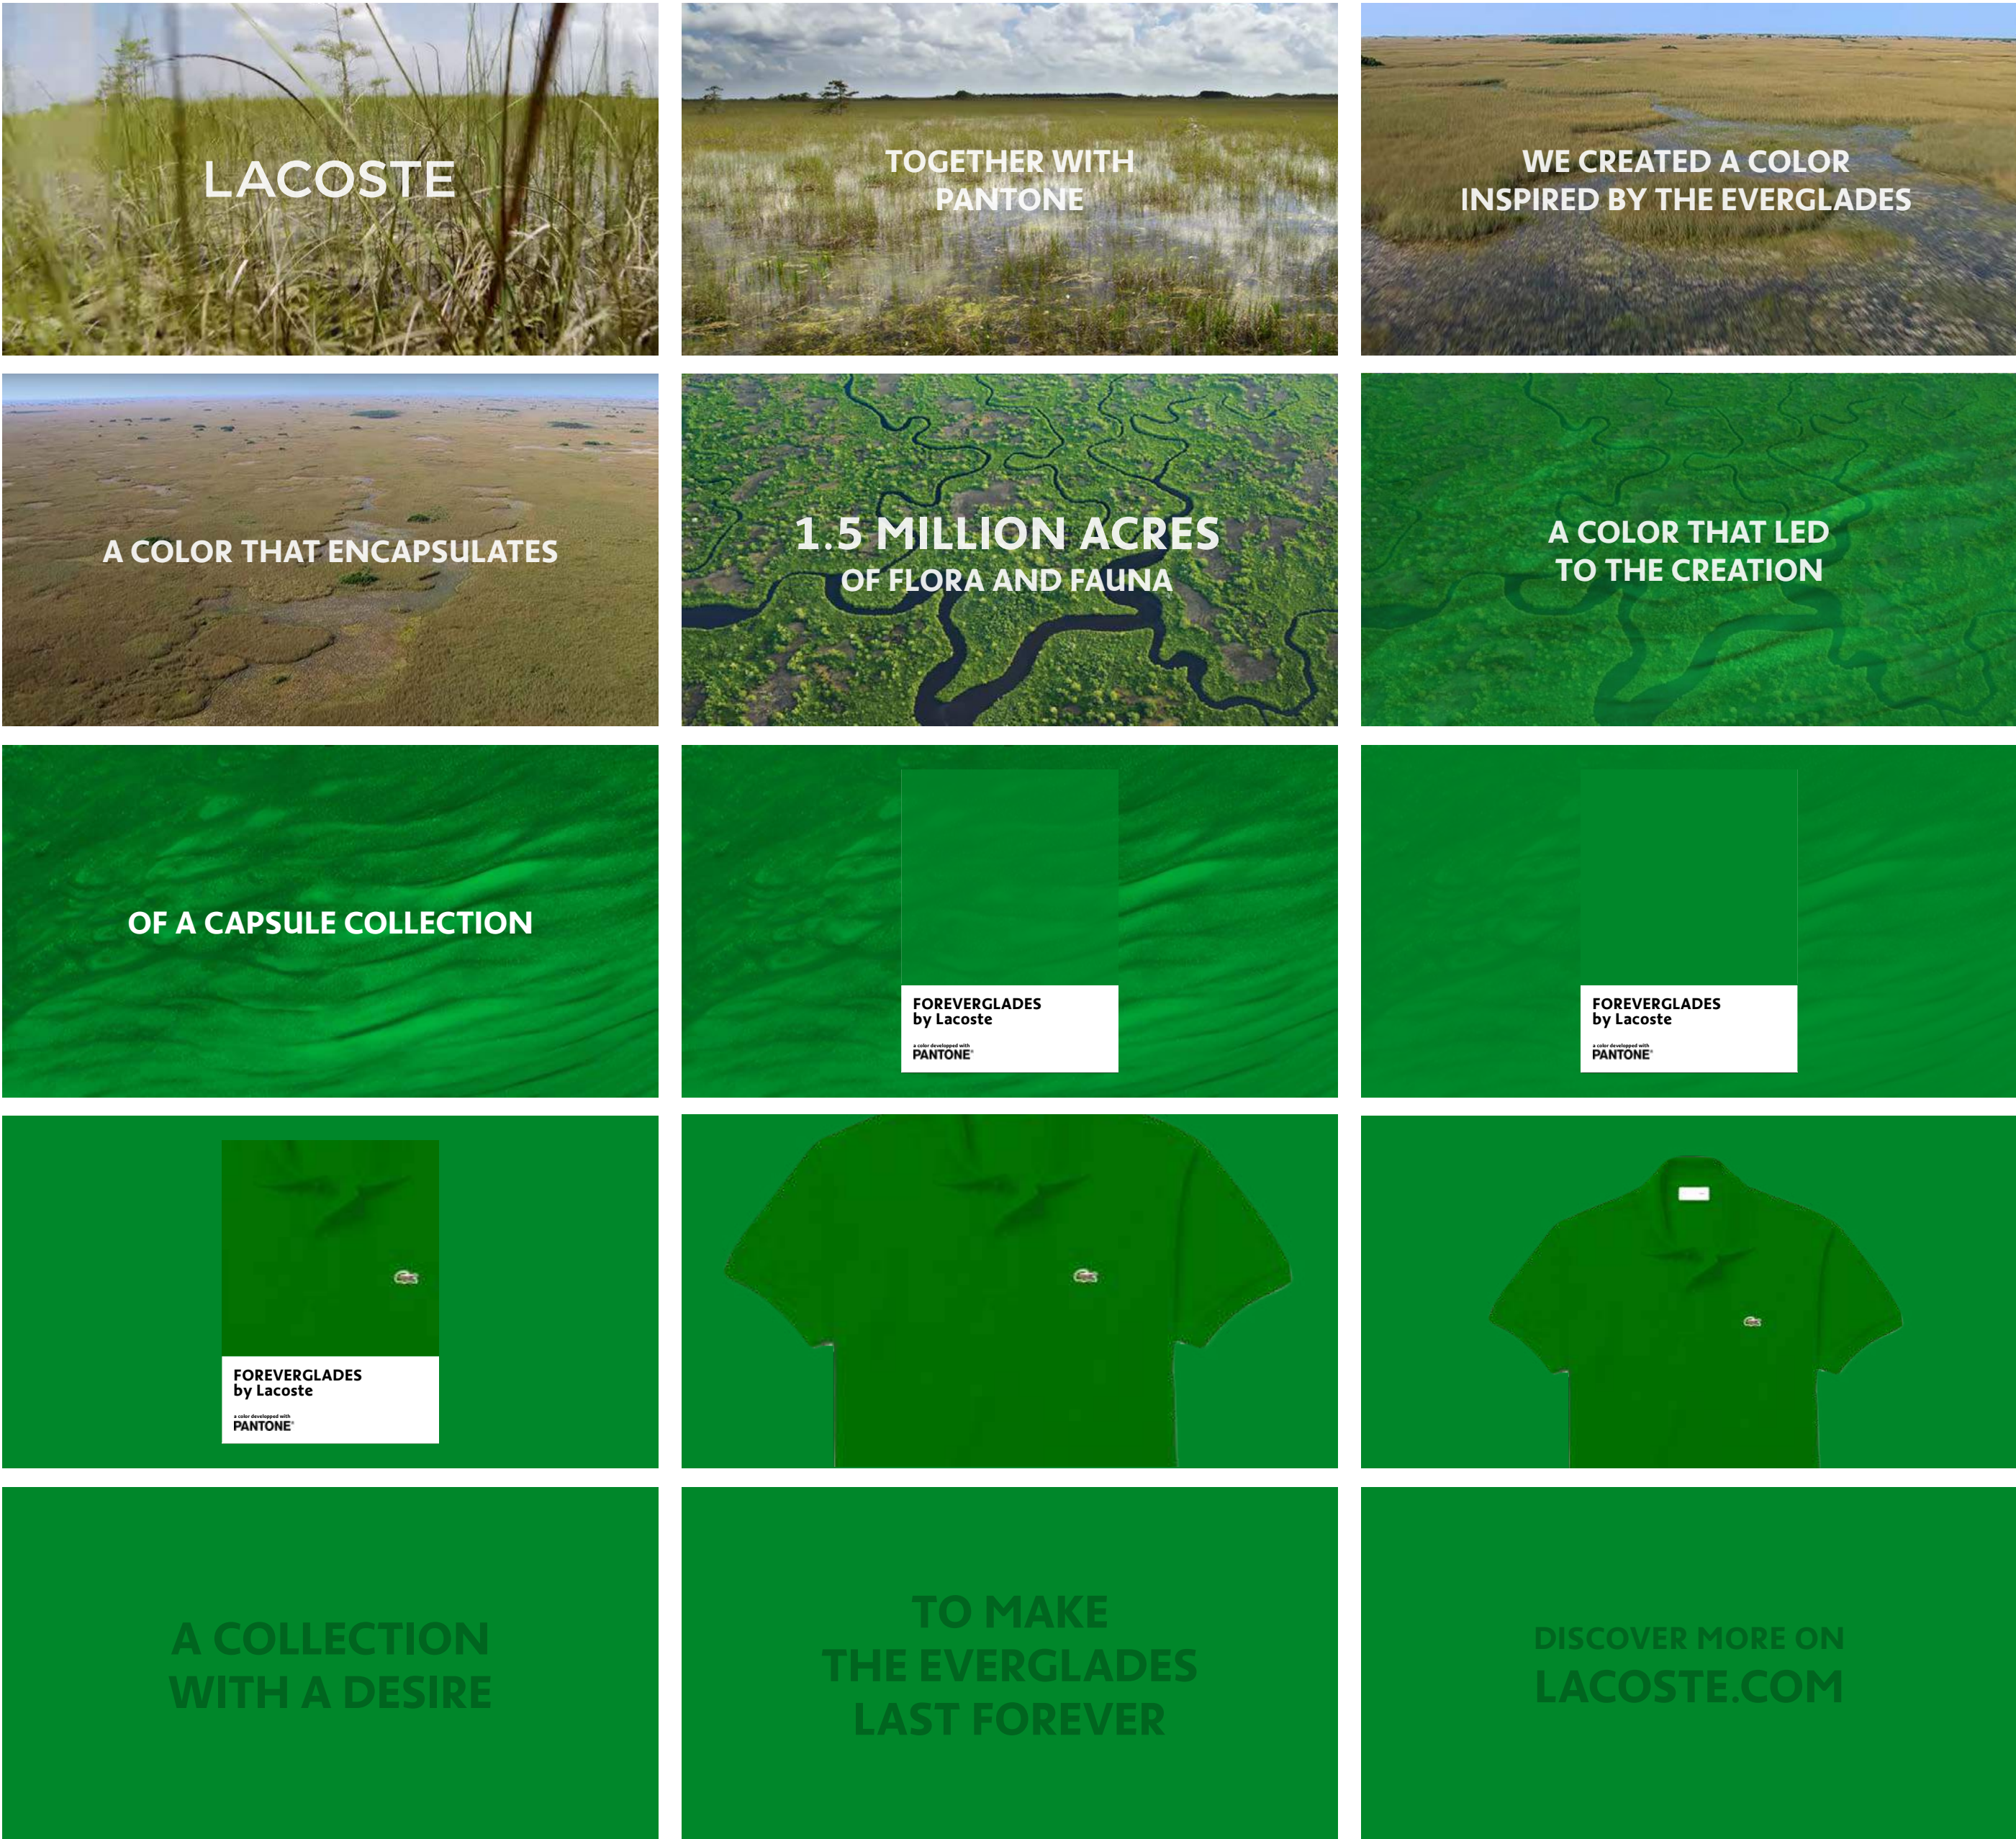

Pantone, The Everglades Foundation + local friends of the brand will share the PR images via stories.

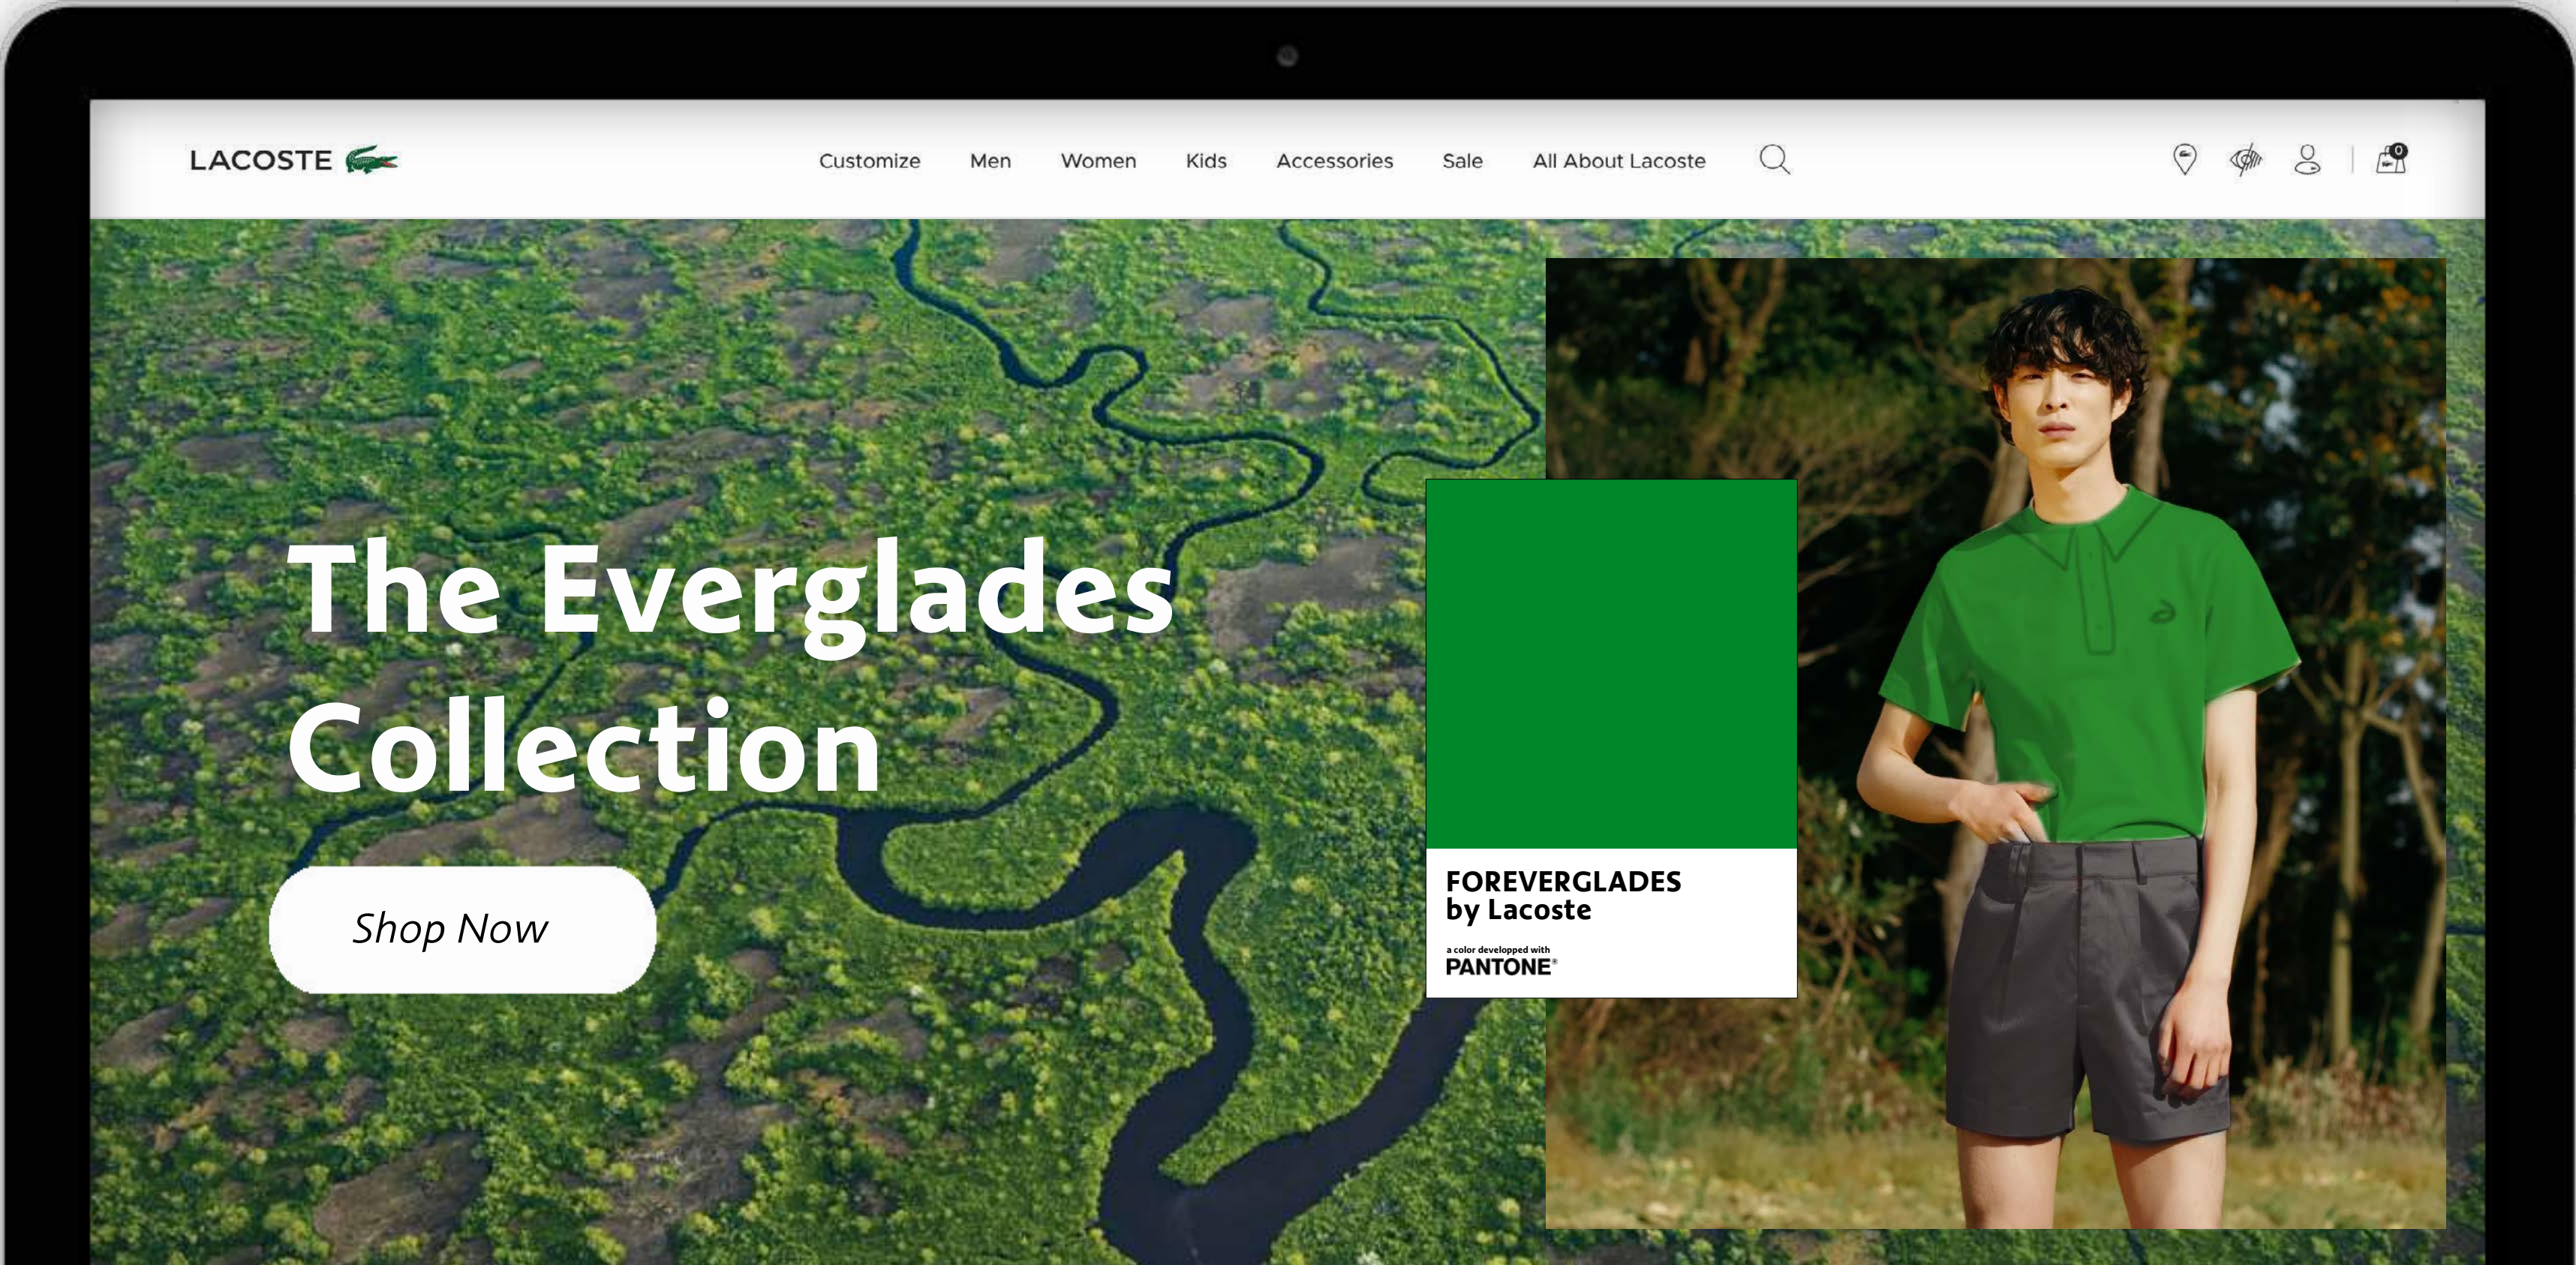

LAUNCH VIDEO

This 15s video will be used to share in more details what inspired the color and the collection. It will showcase drone shots of the Everglades and photos from the collection.

The 20s version can also include “A portion of proceeds from every item sold will be donated to The Everglades Foundation” at the end.
